

Toolkit: a community wealth building energy transition

Lead authors

Eleanor Radcliffe and Laura Williams

Researchers

Victoria Bettany, Amy Clancy,
Matt Fawcett and Amanda Stevens

Carbon
Co-op

We are standing at the brink of an energy revolution which could transform our places. Local government and other public sector organisations have a critical role in ensuring this transition is just, by using their economic power to enable community ownership, new local supply chains and innovative approaches to energy transition which help wealth to stick in our local places and address social inequality.

This four part toolkit from CLES and Carbon Co-op explores what a community wealth building approach to energy transition should look like for the UK.

Follow the links or click on the icons below to access the toolkit.

Part 1: Why community wealth building?

Part 2: Getting started

Part 3: Current and emerging practice

Part 4: Deep dives - Oldham, Nottingham and Birmingham

